Main Author Bio

Crystal Caudill is a tea-drinking, book-hoarding, history nerd. She spent her childhood hiding in a book or going on wild adventures across the country with her family. No matter where she went, stories filled her mind. Every history museum was ripe with potential, every shadow lurked with danger, and always a hero would emerge to save the day. Or least an imaginative girl from a long, boring car ride. While most people outgrew imaginary friends, Crystal's characters took on lives of their own and spilled onto the page. It's her husband's fault she's on a publishing journey. All because he sent her to a writing conference for her birthday. Since then, she's studied the art of writing and crafted award-winning stories filled with history, danger, love, and hope.

When not writing or studying, Crystal can be found playing board games with her husband and boys, caregiving for loved ones, traveling with her extended family, hiding in a book, drinking copious amounts of hot tea, or connecting with readers.
